

Privacy Policy

We hold personal data which you provide to us by contacting us via the enquiries function on our website. We use personal data to provide services or information to you and, where necessary for other legitimate business interests, including for the administration of business or to prevent fraud.

We will only disclose information about a data subject if legally obliged to do so or to comply with contractual duties.

Personal data will be retained for as long as required to fulfil obligations as listed above, or as required by the General Data Protection Regulation or other applicable law or regulation.

A data subject may, under certain circumstances:

- access its personal data and transfer its personal data to another controller;
- rectify its personal data;
- restrict the use of its personal data;
- request that its personal data is erased; and/or
- object to the processing of its personal data.

The circumstances in which a data subject may take any of the above actions are set out in the General Data Protection Regulation.

COOKIE POLICY

What are cookies and how are they used?

We use a technology called “cookies” as part of a normal business procedure. Cookies are small text files that are created by a web server and stored on your computer or device when you visit a website. They are not executable code and can only be read by (you and) the website that created them. You can view and edit the cookies on your computer or device like any other text file using a text editor (the contents are usually just strings of unique identifiers and date/timestamps). The website that created the cookie can read the contents when you are at their website.

Cookies are widely used across the internet; you may have hundreds of cookies on your computer at any one time. Each browser has its own set of cookies so, if you run multiple browsers, you will have multiple sets of cookies on your computer or device.

We use cookies to make a user’s experience of our website more efficient and to improve your browsing experience. We also use Google Analytics, which are third-party cookies that allow us to analyse how users use our website, for example, by counting the number of visitors to the website and calculating the average number of pages a user views. The data we obtain from Google Analytics is valuable in helping us to improve the quality and content of the website.

If at any time you wish to disable our cookies you may do so through the settings on your browser. These settings allow you to specify which cookies you will accept by type and often by specific websites using an exception list, for example, you can block all cookies and then list the website from which you will accept cookies. Please note, however, that withdrawing your agreement to the use of cookies on our website will impair the functionality of the website.
